Payments and Premiums

A widely projected surge in share-exchange mergers that was fingered as a likely outgrowth of the 1986 bull market in stocks simply did not materialize through the first half of 1986. However, the higher level of stock prices may have led to a significant reduction in purchase price premiums, which were at the lowest level in six years in the opening six months of 1986.

Statistics compiled by the M&A Data Base suggest that in spite of the bull market, forms of acquisition currencies continued in early 1986 to be dominated by marketplace demands including the intense competition for highly desirable targets. The prevailing environment continues to favor the bidder willing to pay all cash for all shares of the target.

In fact, the proportion of all-cash deals actually increased slightly in the first half of 1986 when compared with 1984 and 1985, the two years in which cash transactions assumed overwhelming dominance over stock swaps. Thus, in the first half of 1986, 24 percent of all transactions involved straight cash purchases, or nearly one in four deals. The proportion was three times as great as that enjoyed by share-exchange deals, or 7.9 percent.

Cash deals accounted for 22.5 percent of all transactions in 1984 and 23.1 percent in 1985.

Moreover, the proportion of deals involving exchanges of shares did not change significantly from the recent past. The first-half percentage was up from 6.6 percent for all of 1985 but below the 8.1 percent for all of 1984.

In addition to the competitive aspects of the marketplace, the continued popularity of cash deals underscored the enduring reluctance of many target companies and their shareholders to accept stock that is subject to change in value from future stock market fluctuations. While high-priced stock may be an attractive acquisition currency for minimizing buyer costs, it can meet resistance from sellers who fear an intensified downside risk at current stock market prices.

One way in which buyers apparently have attempted to reduce costs and risks, however, is in the tempering of premiums. While still substantial, the premiums were on the descent in early 1986 and, indeed, that decline extended a trend that had been underway since the start of the 1980s.

The biggest drop was logged in the premiums paid over stock prices that prevailed the day before the deal was announced. The average in the first half of 1986 was 31.8 percent, down sharply from 43.4 percent in all of 1985.

Premiums over stock prices that prevailed a month before the deal was announced were not so hard hit. Thus, in the first half of 1986, the average premium was 47.1 percent against 52.5 percent in 1985 but the same as the 30-day preannouncement premium for 1984.

Whether a function of the recent bull market or more savvy preacquisition size-ups by buyers, the fact is that premiums have come down from the lofty peaks of 1981, early in the m&a wave of the 1980s. In that year, recent peaks were established in both categories — an average premium of a whopping 70.7 percent over prices 30 days before announcement and 50.6 percent over prices the day before disclosure of a deal.

The data suggest a unique cross-trend in that the competition in the m&a marketplace has forced a continued emphasis on all-cash deals but hasn't swollen premiums at the same time. □ takeovers. The early wave of recaps — including Phillips Petroleum, CBS, Atlantic Richfield, and Unocal — pivoted on swaps of common for debt securities to shrink outstanding shares.

Preselling

The technique of preselling a target's businesses — popularized by Turner Broadcasting's aborted bid for CBS and actually executed in Pantry Pride's takeover of Revlon — took a significant twist in the hostile $697 million bid for Anderson, Clayton by the team of Bear, Stearns and Gruss & Co. Quaker Oats, which agreed in advance to buy the Gaines pet food division of Anderson, Clayton for $250 million if the bidders won out, did more than sit on the sidelines and wait. It put the money in up front to help finance the tender.

High-Tech Highlights

Smaller, entrepreneurially run high-technology companies are merging faster than they expected, and at an increasing rate. The aim: to get sufficient size so they can go public in the currently strong IPO market. Other technology firms — principally in computers and related fields — are merging as well to gain the greater diversity needed in a market that is shifting away from highly specialized, single-purpose products.

Movies, Movies

Motion picture producers are edging back into theater ownership in the first significant forward integration in the industry since the Justice Department forced a production-exhibition break-up in the 1950s. Cineplex Odeon, 50-percent owned by MCA, bought RKO Century Warner Theatres, New York, and Plitt Theatres, Los Angeles. Paramount, a Gulf & Western subsidiary and one of the four big studios that was part of the 1950s consent decree, acquired 24 screens from Trans-Lux Corp. Canon Group bought a British chain.

Banking Action

Midwestern and Middle Atlantic states have joined the clusters of states allowing interstate banking on a regional, reciprocal basis. The new laws open a wide swath of populous and heavily industrialized territories with some of the largest commercial banks to interstate acquisitions. Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve clarified the boundaries for commercial bank diversification allowing entrance into such nonbank areas as consumer finance counseling, tax planning and preparation, futures and options advisory services, check guarantee services, collection agencies and credit bureaus, and personal property appraisals.

LBO Public Market

Public investors were getting a direct shot at LBO deals. Prospect Group became the first publicly held corporation to specialize in leveraged buyout acquisitions. JSC/MS Holdings, a venture of Jefferson Smurfit and Morgan Stanley Leveraged Equity Fund, filed to sell $652 million in debentures publicly to finance its $1.06 billion acquisition of Container Corp. of America from Mobil Corp. □

A Feverish Market

Panel on Leveraged Buyouts

Surging LBO Prices As a Double-Edged Sword

Rising prices for leveraged buyouts represent one of the most serious issues for the LBO player, not only in the present conduct of the market but in how it will evolve in the future. The price escalation results, according to panelists, from a combination of the high level of the stock market and the proliferation of LBO groups who, by bringing in large pools of money and financing creativity, are competing strongly for desirable targets. On the flip side, Moe Gold points out, the rising prices give corporate sellers a rare opportunity to fetch premiums on respectably performing properties they might want to divest.

Summing it up from an individual perspective, Kipp Gosewehr noted: "Three years ago, Charterhouse never considered paying over nine times earnings for the companies we buy — mundane companies, mature companies but of quality and with modest growth. Today, we're seriously bidding in the 12 to 14 times aftertax earnings range to those same kinds of companies."

Gold said the inexperience of new LBO groups often contributes to the brisk bidding that drives up prices. "There is a motivation to invest now, because there's a pressure point for employing those funds and that drives their bidding activity to the point where they will overpay," he commented. "That's a serious issue."

Simultaneously, Gold said, divesting corporations are responding when they sell into the market.

"They recognize that these forces are at play, that there is an auction there, and it presents them with the unique opportunity to enter a kind of competitive auction situation and take advantage of it," he asserted. "When they are selling assets that are better performing, they want a premium for those assets."

A major manifestation of the rising prices and frenzied bidding has been the wave of early cash-outs, including the significant number of LBO companies that have been going public. Gosewehr pointed out that Charterhouse was considering public offerings for five companies that it bought in 1985 to "relieve the debt pressures." "That's something that we have never done before," he stated. "We've typically waited until the debt was paid down to a reasonable level before taking it public."

Gold maintained that the pricing issue should force more LBO buyers to seriously consider — years ahead — exactly how they will cash out. "I'm not sure that they think enough about the process of how they're going to get out of the transaction," he asserted. "If, in fact, serious consideration is given to that issue, I think you will begin to deal with the more realistic aspects with respect to pricing."

Fears of Failure In a Changing Environment

The fallout of the current pricing trends are likely to be felt well into the future. One consequence, says Gosewehr, may be an increased number of LBO failures, because of a cascading series of influences.

The negatives start with overpayments which, Gosewehr said, are only "deferring problems into the future." "We're now buying companies on the basis of projected earnings rather than historical earnings, and that's happened in just the last three years." An aggravation is that LBO players must operate in a short time horizon, five to seven years, while corporate buyers can take as long as two decades to make their deals successful. A final irritant that he cited was the lack of management strength at financially oriented LBO houses coupled with the pressures being put on target managements "not only to operate these businesses but to grow them" so the inflated prices can be paid off. "It kind of flies in the face of what a classic LBO was."

Indeed, Gosewehr claimed that there might be some LBO companies that are in real trouble, a situation that is being disguised by the beneficence of leading banks. "Given the other problems in banks today — the Third World loans, the oil loans — the last thing that banks want to do is to start broadcasting that they are having problems with LBOs," he asserted.

Gosewehr described an extreme situation that has been fostered by the competitive environment fueled by the plethora of financing. "I received a call from a guy in the South who wanted to buy a company," he recounted. "He had the equity and the senior debt, but he needed mezzanine money. I told him he was paying an unrealistic price. He stopped for a moment and responded, 'What has price got to do with it? As long as I get the money, that doesn't matter'."

Gosewehr predicted that the intense competition and its negative outgrowths probably will lead to a shakeout in which "only the large, well-capitalized LBO firms will survive."

But Gosewehr also expressed fear that before the shakeout comes, the rising prices will, themselves, dampen activity. "The top multiple we can pay is 13 to 14 times earnings," he suggested. "Once you get beyond that, I would venture to say it's impossible to do an LBO."

Growing Popularity Abroad

The incidence of LBOs is climbing steadily outside the United States, especially in the United Kingdom, according to Warren Kanders. The dollar value of British LBOs came to $1.2 billion in 1985, or greater than the total dollar volume for the previous five years combined. Feeding the British LBO movement, he said, are the restructuring of British companies, much like American firms have been doing for some time; availability of financing; and the willingness of foreign-owned banks setting up shop in the U.K. to supply funds for LBOs. "Foreign banks see this as a way of gaining entry into the U.K. market," he pointed out.

Lock Up Constraints

Court decisions that invalidated lock ups in the hostile takeovers of Revlon Inc. and SCM Corp. have "far-reaching implications for managers who may want to propose an LBO," according to Jack Fitzsimmons.

The board has been turned into an auctioneer charged with getting the highest price possible when its company becomes a target, Fitzsimmons said, and cannot impede the auction process or favor a particular bidder. As a result, he maintained, if managements are competing with other bidders, the outsiders must get access to various internal documents that relate to the health and performance. "This may make a management group think twice unless they are really sure of their ability to pay top price," Fitzsimmons stated. "They may be reluctant to propose an LBO and risk that the company will go into play, that someone else will outbid them, and that they will be at the mercy of the new owners."

The American Attraction

Panel on Transatlantic M&A

A DISCONCERTING ASPECT of cross-border merger and acquisition activity continues to be the reluctance of American companies to buy overseas while foreign concerns, particularly in Europe, are whetting their interest in the U.S.

John Herrmann said the U.S. and Canada are natural extensions for European firms that look at their home markets and "see that they have no place to go." Conversely, American companies have a fear of invading foreign markets — "that they don't know how to do it well; that they don't know how to run the businesses well," Herrmann stated. Such skittishness may boomerang, Herrmann maintained, because as industries in other countries consolidate, "we may be missing an opportunity to participate in the globalization of corporations."

Nicholas Villiers said American firms are discouraged by a lack of large overseas targets that can impact a buyer's financial performance. "When you are a General Foods or a Philip Morris, the impact of a European acquisition is likely to be negligible," he noted. Anthony Hass, General Foods vice president and an experienced overseas buyer, said Europe's appeal is dimmed by a lack of growth and a paucity of companies with "market dominance or large franchises." "There are very few companies available that would give you major national, or ideally Pan-European, presence," he commented. "There aren't any Coca-Colas, any Kodaks, any IBMs that have a really major franchise in many countries."

Competition intensifies in U.K.

International m&a activity, however, is increasing in many foreign countries:

United Kingdom: Outside the U.S., the m&a pace is strongest and the technique most sophisticated in Britain, where dollar value of deals reached $7 billion in 1985 from $1.1 billion in 1981, and topped $6 billion in the first four months of 1986. The increase in numbers of transactions and deal size, said Richard Huber, reflects a change from the "old-boy, gentlemen's club-type atmosphere" to a more competitive environment in which American m&a tactics are being employed with more frequency. Huber pointed to use of greater leverage, all-cash transactions, and more hostile deals as examples. One primary problem is the fuzziness of criteria for the Office of Fair Trading to refer deals to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, which involves a six-month window that allows a target to erect a strong defense. Huber noted that OFT referred the bid by Elders IXL Ltd. of Australia for the giant Allied-Lyons PLC food combination while taking no action on the Guinness PLC acquisition of Distillers PLC that involved 35 percent of the U.K. whiskey market. "The fact that one is an upstart colonial and the other is part of the old-boy network, I'm sure, has nothing to do with it," he remarked. The rapid evolution, he suggested, endangers the current system of voluntary rules and regulations for m&a conduct that are handed down by a self-regulatory panel. "There hasn't been a single case where its rulings have not been abided by, but I sort of wager we will see the first break with that in the not too distant future," he stated.

A world tour

Canada: Brian Marshall reported that m&a activity is gaining steam north of the border with deals averaging 700 annually in 1984 and 1985, and an increasing number of large transactions logged after the government's creation of Investment Canada to encourage foreign investment. Two-thirds of the acquisitions are being made by foreign companies with 80 percent of them based in the U.K. and West Germany.

"I think there are particularly good investment opportunities when one looks at assets against market value," Marshall asserted. "In the more industrialized segments of our economy, asset values and market values have aligned themselves pretty well. There isn't the gap or the perceived gap that was there a year or two ago."

Marshall also saw the government's efforts to sell "crown corporations" and government-run enterprises such as DeHavilland Aircraft, Canadair, Teleglobe, and Canada Development as offering m&a potential.

Japan: Huber described it as a big market with "great potential." But Herrmann put a "question mark" on Japan, noting that "we've been talking about that potential for probably five years."

Australia: Although rules on foreign investment are restrictive, a "generation of entrepreneurs" that is aggressive and creative has developed and is seeking opportunities overseas, according to Villiers. The Elders bid for Allied-Lyons was an example.

France: Villiers said the French plan to sell off government-owned enterprises offers an "enormous opportunity" for foreign investment because of capital needs. While the French have tended to be "positively chauvinistic" about foreign ownership, "the privatization requirements are so massive that at this stage there is going to be a far more liberal atmosphere than we've seen hitherto."

Brazil: There has been a "flurry of deals, mergers, acquisitions, and divestitures" in the last several months, Huber reported. "Where one thought not at all of this kind of business as late as a year or two ago, it has now become a very active market."

Latin America: Some countries are gearing up to sell state-owned enterprises and this could offer m&a prospects, Huber said. ■

In Quest of Value

Panel on Acquisition Pricing

REALIZING OPTIMUM VALUE from an acquisition requires attention to detail across every band of the m&a spectrum. Fletcher Allen says a rewarding pay-off can be obtained only when the acquirer has a sharply focused acquisition strategy with reasonably firm criteria on what it wants to buy and what it wants from the deal. Jim Needham, while asserting that price and value are not synonymous, comments that the important elements include assiduous "homework" on the target, structuring a deal for downside protection, and, ultimately, how the acquired firm is operated. Hugh MacMullan adds that appraisals and valuations of both tangible and intangible assets are essential in establishing base values, developing collateral for lenders, and generating maximum tax benefits for the acquirer.

"Obtaining full value for the price basically boils down to the work that is put in on focusing on a strategy," Allen maintained. "It is a strategic issue — the way the companies fit together — that determines the potential value of the acquisition." A sharp focus up front, he pointed out, will help the acquirer through a laborious and rigorous search project that may begin with hundreds of targets before the same are winnowed to a relative handful of truly desirables that can be contacted for possible negotiations.

Needham's message was that the buyer in search of full value must go beyond the cold cash flow statements and other financials into the personalities and capabilities of management and the "competitive dynamics" of the marketplace to assess a target realistically. The financials, he asserted, often are "more smoke than reality," but can be helpful in forcing a buyer to focus on strategy, or, more specifically, what strategies will be pursued to make the deal pay off and how the deal will be structured to protect the buyer's investment.

But in reiterating that price and value cannot be used interchangeably, Needham contended that price often has very little to do with "perceived value" but equals "what it takes to get the deal done." "Acquisition premiums invariably can't be recaptured when you start paying the prices that are being paid for acquisitions today," he stated. As a result, he maintained, the buyer must conduct a top-to-bottom assessment of all characteristics of the target, even though they can't be fully factored into the financials. "No acquisition can be successful unless the guy who signs off on the acquisition really understands the business," Needham said.

MacMullan noted that tax benefits often figure into the achievement of full value, in part because they determine whether the buyer should opt for a Section 338 election and treat a stock sale as an asset sale. These include tight valuations that can be justified in allocating assets to purchase prices for the Internal Revenue Service and in "finding" depreciable intangible assets that can be appropriately written up to generate additional tax advantages. ■

The Busiest Dealmakers

In terms of pure merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity, General Electric has done the most to restructure itself during the 1980s. The giant company is the only concern to appear on the lists of both the most active acquirers and the most active divestors, which were prepared by the M&A Data Base. GE was in sixth place for number of acquisitions made from 1981 through the first half of 1986 — with 24 — and tied for second among the most frequent divestors, with 22.

On the basis of known deal prices, GE's acquisitions and sell-offs also involved the largest amounts of dollars that changed hands among the most active buyers and sellers. However, these data are necessarily incomplete because of a high incidence of deals without announced prices. Thus, for the 16 acquisitions on which GE revealed price, the purchases were worth nearly $8.5 billion while around $4 billion was received in its 12 divestitures with known prices.

Of the acquisitions, $6.1 billion alone was consumed by the purchase of RCA completed in May 1986, and nearly $1.1 billion was spent to purchase Employers Reinsurance from Texaco in 1984. Divestiture proceeds included $2.4 billion from the sale of Utah International to Broken Hill Proprietary in 1984 in what still ranks as the highest-priced corporate sell-off in history. Another $600 million was obtained from selling the Family Financial Services unit to Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, now known as Meritor Financial, in 1984, and $300 million from the sale of the housewares unit to Black & Decker,

Although the extensive dealmaking did not result in a radical corporate face-lift — of the type achieved by Allied-Signal or Gould — it nevertheless resulted in significant changes in GE operations. The RCA deal put the company into entertainment and broadened communications and defense businesses, while other significant deals were in computer products, oil, integrated circuits, and financial services. Divestitures took

GE out of uranium and coal mining, central air conditioning, mortgage banking, small appliances, and — for a short period until RCA was acquired — radio and TV stations.

Tied for first place among the most active acquirers were Merrill Lynch, the giant investment banking and financial service company, and National Medical Enterprises, a large operator of hospitals — each with 40. The only deal for which Merrill disclosed a price was the 1984 acquisition of Becker Paribas, another investment banking organization, for $99.2 million. Most of the acquisitions were in the real estate brokerage field where Merrill Lynch built a nationwide network only to announce in late 1986 that it was planning to sell its real estate business. National Medical concentrated on hospital and related health care acquisitions.

Acquisitive publishers

Publishing and communications produced the most members of the 12 most active acquirers list, four. The heavy buyers in this field included MacMillan (second place); Dun & Bradstreet (fourth); and International Thomson Organisation and McGraw-Hill which tied with Ryder System for last place. Conversely, there were only two members from companies generally considered as industrial, GE, and ConAgra, a food processor which has been active in buying units divested by other companies. Merrill Lynch joined with American Express, whose acquisitions included Shearson Loeb Rhoades, Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, and Investors Diversified Services, to represent financial services. Other service firms included Ryder and Allegheny Beverage. Sears, Roebuck was the only retailer on the list but its key acquisitions were in financial services — Dean Witter and Coldwell Banker — plus a number of add-on purchases in the real estate field.

The most frequent divestor between the start of 1981 through the first half of 1986 was Beatrice Cos. which pursued a many-sided restructuring program before being taken private in a leveraged buyout in May 1986. The big food and consumer products company logged 49 sell-offs involving $1.6 billion for the 17 deals in which prices were announced.

Unlike the most-active-acquisition list, the slate of frequent divestors is skewed toward the industrial side, where there has been a noticeable willingness among managements to divest mature businesses or those that no longer fit with strategies.

Three of the companies were prominent conglomerates that took shape during the 1960s — Gulf & Western, Textron, and City Investing which went through the process of liquidating itself. Although not considered conglomerates, three other active divestors, Allegheny International, Westinghouse Electric, and CBS, had been known for widespread diversification while Chromalloy American also took shape as a company with operations in a wide variety of markets and industries.

In years past, the list of most-active divestors might have resembled the roll of most active buyers.

The Private Lives Of Textile Industry LBOs

Richard Klein

The U.S. textile industry is in the doldrums, but six major companies acquired in leveraged buyouts say they are benefitting from private ownership. Executives of the companies say they have tightened financial controls and production processes to become stronger competitors.

MANAGERS OF six major textile firms that went private through leveraged buyouts between mid-1982 and late 1984 claim they now operate better-managed, leaner, and more viable companies as a result of operational and financial changes since the deals were completed. Private ownership obviously has not eased the industry's basic and chronic problems, such as the encroachment of imports on domestic markets and the long slump that has been afflicting the trade since the early 1980s. Yet, the managements of textile LBOs maintain that their own companies have become more formidable competitors that are better able to deal with the adverse conditions.

These conclusions are based on a survey of the six concerns conducted during 1986. Although complete details were hard to obtain owing to the reluctance of privately owned firms to divulge much about their finances and operations, the results provide one of the first glimpses of the post-LBO experiences within a major industry group that logged a significant incidence of leveraged buyouts.

On the plus side, five of the companies were operating as independent entities by late 1986 and, according to their managements, generating sufficient cash to service their debt. A sixth, Blue Bell Inc., was acquired in August 1986 by VF Corp. for $775 million, or more than $90 million above the total financing required to take the jeans manufacturer private in November 1984. The managements reported they have executed a far-reaching series of postacquisition improvements ranging from disposal of excess property to tighter capital budgeting to critical innovations in production.

However, the data and accompanying analyses suggest that conditions for a wave of future LBOs in the textile industry are less than auspicious. The LBO, statistics for the six firms indicate, is an expensive deal, the heavy debt load assumed by LBO companies intensifies the risks already presented by a troubled industry, and the need to service the debt effectively takes the textile LBO out of contention for desirable acquisitions at a time when the industry is rationalizing and consolidating through mergers and acquisitions. Moreover, there are indications that financing may be less plentiful for textile LBOs and postacquisition divestitures more difficult to accomplish.

Model LBO companies

Besides Blue Bell, the companies covered in the survey are Cone Mills Corp., Dan River Inc., Reeves Brothers Inc., Standard-Coosa-Thatcher Co., and Ti-Caro Inc. (see Table 1). A seventh textile company, Emb-Tex, was excluded because it was privately held prior to its LBO acquisition by present owners and adequate financial data were not available.

While the 1982-84 wave of textile LBOs cannot be classified as a temporary phenomenon, the six companies that took the LBO route to privatization came close to being LBO prototypes, and their advantageous characteristics may not be matched by many other textile companies still publicly owned. Despite the industry's problems, all of the six firms were generally profitable and in position to generate cash flows for servicing the LBO debt. Only one of the six, Dan River, posted a loss in the last full year before privatization and that resulted from one-time plant closing costs of $2 a share.

Respectable performances notwithstanding, the firms were not well treated by the stock market, apparently a reflection of the low state in which the textile industry was held by public investors. Only Blue Bell stock was selling in excess of per-share book value — by a margin of 9.8 percent — two months before announcement of the deal. Others were trading at discounts to book value that ranged from 7.1 percent for Ti-Caro to 50.5 percent for Dan River (see Table 2).

In the main, then, the companies were selling at even steeper discounts from the replacement value of their assets, especially when it is considered that the economy experienced a period of nearly hyperinflation in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

As a result, the buyers were able to complete the LBOs at apparently reasonable prices. Substantial premiums over market prices two months before the deal was announced were paid in each case. They ranged from 29.7 percent for Blue Bell to 60.8 percent for Ti-Caro. In four of the six instances, this resulted in premiums over accounting book value per share as well — 42.4 percent for Blue Bell, 21.3 percent for Cone Mills, 12 percent for Reeves Brothers, and 49.4

percent for Ti-Caro. The price for Dan River reflected a 28.2 percent discount from book and the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher price was 26.6 percent below book. Yet, all of these prices appeared to be well below replacement value of the companies' assets. Moreover, the total financing was substantially below total assets acquired in four of the cases, slightly below for Blue Bell, and exceeded total assets only in the Ti-Caro deal.

Accounting practices of the textile firms were conservative. Inventories typically were valued at LIFO and properties owned for several years were carried at cost.

An analysis of LBO prospectuses and financial statements indicated that inventories were substantially undervalued in all six cases. For example, if Standard-Coosa-Thatcher had used FIFO instead of LIFO for valuing inventories, they would have increased in value by $14.4 million, an amount equal to 32.4 percent of total financing. The undervalued inventories thus could be used to reduce the LBO-imposed debt load and, following the deal, managements could be expected to impose stringent controls that would reduce inventories even further and hold down the amount of capital tied up in amassing their stocks of goods. Additionally, all of the firms enjoyed substantial physical assets — including buildings and machinery — that could be stepped up after the LBO to replacement or fair market value with an attendant increase in depreciations, tax benefits, and cash flow.

The nub of the combined financial picture was that the six firms enjoyed the strong collateralized base that asset-based lenders like when calculating potential cash flows and that the potential for asset disposition could add to the cash flow stream.

As an aside, the LBO served as a virtual white knight mechanism for Dan River, Blue Bell, and Cone Mills, which were targets of hostile takeover attempts.

The outwardly rosy scenario, however, was marred by the massive upsurge in debt-to-capitalization ratios which exceeded 0.90 in every case and reached a maximum of 0.98 for Standard-Coosa-Thatcher (see Table 3). The shift to a situation in which 90 percent or more of long-term funding was in debt marked a radical departure from prior experience in which debt was held down (another characteristic of an LBO prototype). The pre-LBO debt-to-capitalization ratios ranged from 0.02 for Cone Mills to 0.34 for Dan River. Admittedly, the debt-to-capitalization ratio is not a truly accurate measure of financial risk and the burdens of the five surviving firms have been eased by declining interest rates. But the magnitude of the ratio changes is so large that it suggests that investments in the textile firms immediately after the LBOs were considerably more risky than before.

On the whole, the LBO proved to be an expensive deal to put together for the six textile firms. The fees and expenses were rather substantial and accounted for nearly 4 percent of the total financing in the Blue Bell deal, or $24.8 million (see Table 4).

Concentration on generating cash flow

Key textile managers responding to my survey insisted their firms are more proficiently and conservatively managed since going private. Their major motivation has been generation of cash flow to service debt with a resulting deemphasis on the consistent quarterly improvement in profits that is demanded by the public marketplace. Respondents cited reductions in current assets, cutting of overhead, improved planning, tightened criteria for capital spending, and emphasis on seeking opportunities in specialized market niches or areas where the firm can be a leader among their streamlining efforts.

To improve working capital, the textile firms reported, they installed advanced computer systems to control inventories and trim inventory investments. Receivables are more closely controlled and prompt collections of bills have been emphasized. Sophisticated cash management techniques have been put in place at some of the firms to optimize float and further improve cash flows. Reeves Brothers is one company that reported an upgrading of cash management. Better cash control has been accompanied by a more conservative approach to funding capital budgets in an industry where one piece of equipment can cost $1 million or more. Greater justification for any capital outlay now is required since the debt-heavy LBO company has small margin for mistakes.

Mining "hidden" assets

Aside from these basic maneuvers, the textile LBOs have been aggressive in searching out and liquifying "hidden" assets. Excess marketable securities at these firms were rare, although Reeves Brothers enjoyed $48 million in short-term investments, or 22.2 percent of total assets at the time it went private. However, attempts to utilize excess employee plan assets have been more fruitful. For example, actuaries determined that Cone Mills pension plans had $50 million more in assets than the present value of plan benefits (vested and non-vested). To recapture the overfunding, without having it treated as taxable income, Cone established an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) and funneled the excess into the ESOP so the company could still use the funds as capital while escaping taxes. Pension benefits were maintained because the company purchased annuities from an insurance company to meet its obligation.

Elimination of dividends that were paid to public shareholders has been another big source of cash and capital. Ti-Caro's dividend load was $6.6 million a year and the company saves between $12 million and $13 million in pretax cash flows by abolishing that payout. Also of significance has been the tax deductions for interest on LBO debt. The benefits multiply if a leveraged ESOP was used — Dan River and Blue Bell employed such mechanisms — because both interest and principal payments are tax deductible.

Steps to reduce operating and overhead expenses have included elimination of excess management layers as well as the familiar post-LBO technique of selling or closing marginal or excess operations. Following its LBO, Blue Bell sold or closed eight of its European plants. In 1985, Dan River sold five plants to ALCHEM Capital.

However, the dubious potential for more asset dispositions looms as a serious obstacle to future textile LBOs. There are about 250 empty textile buildings in the Southeastern United States alone, suggesting that such properties are hard sells that may not be considered strong assets by lenders. Moreover, lenders could get skittish about using textile machinery as collateral because of industry overcapacity, rapidly changing technology, and increased foreign competition. One presumable silver lining is that there is a possibility of selling excess machinery overseas into the rapidly growing offshore textile industry.

Shorter production runs

Operationally, the textile LBO companies report they have improved quality controls, in some cases adopted the Japanese technique of quality circles to stimulate worker productivity, and exerted tighter production controls. One particularly prominent manifestation has been the adoption of shorter and smaller production runs — a method that allows faster delivery, greater emphasis on specialty products, and faster response to fashion changes in the marketplace. Emb-Tex reported such an operational change.

In view of the sketchy post-LBO information that is available, the key measurement of the success of the LBO technique in the textile industry is that none of the six firms in the study has failed. Moreover, the acquisition of Blue Bell by VF is a singular signpost of success. Yet, there is still considerable ground to cover before a firm conclusion on the viability of the LBO in textiles can be reached. The initial emphasis on paying down debt in the wake of the deal — a process that usually consumes five to eight years — could over the longer term imbue the managements with a streak of ultraconservatism that would discourage further innovation. Moreover, the industry's difficulties have made it hard to attract qualified management and provide for continuity of executive talent. Finally asset dispositions, if accomplished in the face of the aforementioned "hard-sell" possibilities, could leave the company ill-equipped to meet longer-range needs.

Table 4: Six Textile LBOs — Financing Costs

Company	Total Financing	LBO Fees and Expenses

While the brisk 1982-84 pace of textile LBOs was not matched subsequently, they have not dried up altogether. In July 1986, privately owned Walton Monroe Mills acquired Avondale Mills for $113 million. In the related area of apparel, Health-tex, manufacturer of children's clothing, was acquired by its management from Chesebrough-Pond's Inc. for an undisclosed sum in 1985, and in the biggest apparel LBO of all, Levi Strauss & Co. went private the same year for $1.1 billion. Whether this trickle returns to a greater rush, however, depends on a number of counterbalancing factors. On the plus side, there are the sharp decline in interest rates plus, at least outwardly, the characteristics that lenders normally covet in financing an LBO. Additionally, a number of LBO candidates exist outside the public market — either private companies whose owners want to liquidate their assets by selling, or divisions of publicly owned companies, such as Health-tex, that could be divested amid corporate restructurings.

But there are numerous sticking points as well. Some, such as the maturity and long-term recessionary trends within the industry, foreign competition, increasing lender reticence, asset disposal problems, and difficulties in attracting management already have been cited. Still others loom. Stock prices for textile companies are up in line with the general bull market and an expected drop in cotton prices, making prices less reasonable than during the 1982-84 period. The Value Line index of 10 publicly held U.S. textile firms posted a 57-percent median increase over the 12 months ended June 30, 1986, with gains ranging from 40 percent for West Point-Pepperell Inc., to 216 percent for Fieldcrest Cannon Inc. (formerly Fieldcrest Mills).

The heavy debt loads incurred by LBO companies effectively preclude them from becoming major ac-quirers themselves, an especially sore point during a time when rationalizing acquisitions have been proliferating. In 1985 and 1986, major deals included the Springs Industries Inc. acquisition of M. Lowenstein Corp. ($263 million); Fieldcrest Mills Inc.'s purchase of Cannon Mills bed and bath business ($250 million); West Point-Pepperell Inc.'s white knight acquisition of Cluett Peabody & Co. Inc. ($371 million); J. P. Stevens & Co. Inc.'s purchase of the sheet and towel operations of Burlington Industries Inc. ($110 million); and Burlington's successful tender offer for C. H. Masland & Sons ($110 million).

Cash-out considerations

The all-important matter of cash-outs is still to be dealt with, although the VF acquisition of Blue Bell is the primary success story on this front. Public ownership had been a tough proposition for most textile firms for many years, a factor which triggered many of the LBOs. Firms in related areas such as Pannill Knitting and Leslie Fay went public in 1986 after previous LBOs, but they are in finished or branded apparel products sold directly to the consumer. The ability to go public again may depend on how well the textile LBOs secure attractive market niches and emphasize specialty products with some proprietary component.

Finally, there is the still unresolved issue of how LBOs will be impacted by the 1986 changes in federal tax laws. Repeal of the General Utilities doctrine apparently impairs the ability of many LBO companies to step up assets for purposes of generating cash, increasing collateral values, and reaping tax benefits. These have been major factors in prior LBOs but may lose their punch as the new tax provisions go into effect.

All of these trends suggested a limited future use for LBOs in the textile industry. Given the large amount of money flowing into the LBO market and the potential for enhancing value in an industry that is still encountering strong foreign competition, it seems likely that textile firms will not be entirely bypassed. But the trade-offs suggest that most of the activity will be concentrated in privately owned companies and in corporate divestitures with only an occasional going-private deal to punctuate the trend. ■

QUARTERLY PROFILE presents m&a data extracted from the M&A Data Base. These data are the most current available at press time; however, data may be revised in future issues of Mergers & Acquisitions and may be at variance with figures presented in Quarterly Profiles of earlier issues as a result of additional information being received in the data base following the close of a financial quarter or following press time.

The M&A Data Base includes up to 140 vital points of information for each transaction. To qualify for inclusion in the M&A Data Base a transaction must involve a U.S. firm and must be valued at $1 million or more.

The M&A Rosters™

Third Quarter 1986

75 U.S. Mergers & Acquisitions

American companies purchased 740 businesses in the U.S. in the third quarter for a total price of $33 billion.

161 Foreign Investment in the U.S.

Foreign companies acquired 80 businesses in the United States for a total price of $3.2 billion.

172 U.S. Investment Abroad

American firms purchased 38 foreign concerns for $1.1 billion, almost five times the total price for the second quarter.

178 Update

Additional completed merger, acquisition, and divestiture transactions from second quarter 1986 based on the latest information.

THE M&A ROSTERS, reporting the merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity of U.S. firms, are divided into four sections: U.S. Mergers and Acquisitions, Foreign Investment in the U.S., U.S. Investment Abroad, and an update of completed transactions from the prior quarter. Each section is organized alphabetically by acquirer under two-digit SIC-based industry-segment headings. A tab index, visible to the right of this page, directs users to the four major sections of the Rosters and to specific ranges of SIC-based industry segments within the first section (U.S. firms acquiring U.S. firms). Corresponding page tabs can be located by flexing the book to expose page edges. An index of SIC-based industry headings is at the bottom of the tab index page.

acq. rem. int. — acquired remaining interest in

acq. unit — acquired unit/division of

An asterisk (*) following the acquired company's name indicates a divestiture.

The M&A Rosters are extracted quarterly from the M&A Data Base, a computer-accessible data bank of m&a activity from 1979 to present. While the Rosters provide basic information on all reported transactions of the preceding quarter, additional financial information — such as market price of the acquired company's stock prior to announcement, book value, premium paid, and P/E ratio — can be retrieved quickly from the M&A Data Base. The M&A Data Base also contains current data on pending transactions.

To qualify for inclusion in the M&A Data Base and the M&A Rosters, a transaction must be valued at $1 million or more. Partial acquisitions of 5 percent or more of a company's stock are included if the $1 million threshold is met. Sales of real property are not included. If price has not been revealed, the transaction is included if it is believed to meet the price threshold.

The quarterly Rosters are published in Mergers & Acquisitions as follows: 1st quarter, July/August; 2nd quarter, September/October; 3rd quarter, January/February; 4th quarter, March/April. The Mergers & Acquisitions Almanac & Index, published each May, provides a cross-index of all acquiring and acquired firms of the preceding year.

For information on regular online computer access to the M&A Data Base contact ADP Network Services at 1-800 ADP-DATA. For specific transaction data or customized research reports contact the M&A Data Base Information Center at 1-800-MERGING or 1-215-875-2631.

The Favored LBO Targets

Retailing established itself as the most prominent industry area in the leveraged buyout field during 1986, even outperforming its strong pace of 1985. Deals in the retailing sector topped the LBO field for both number of transactions and dollar volume in 1986, based on data through December 8th of that year. In all of 1985, retailing LBOs recorded the highest dollar volume and were in the runner-up spot for number of transactions. From January through December 8 of 1986, there were 17 LBOs in the retailing area with a dollar value of about $10.8 billion. In all of 1985, the retail area logged 18 LBOs, only one less than the market leader, fabricated metal products, and a dollar value of $2.6 billion, which gave it first place in that category.

Leveraged buyouts thus enjoyed a significant position in the generally strong merger and acquisition activity throughout the retail sector in both 1985 and 1986. Outside the LBO area, for example, prominent deals included May Department Stores' acquisition of Associated Dry Goods and the Campeau Corp. acquisition of Allied Stores.

The lofty dollar value for retail LBOs was built during 1986 largely on three major deals with the $5.3 billion buyout of Safeway Stores by a Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts group pacing the sector. Other megadeals included the management buyout of R. H. Macy and the $1.6 billion buyout of Jack Eckerd by a group that included the management and Merrill Lynch Capital Markets.

Generally, the most active LBO areas of 1985 continued to be prominent in 1986, although there were some interesting shifts in the standings. For example, fabricated metal products, the dealmaking leader in 1985, dropped to a tie for ninth place in 1986 with the number of transactions slipping to 8 from 19. The food industry advanced to a tie for second place from sixth, although the number of deals held at 13. Nonelectrical machinery was the other second place segment, up from fifth, with a slippage in the number of deals to 13 from 15. However, when figures for all of December 1986 are added, both categories are expected to show increases from 1985 levels. Three newcomers appeared on the list of most active industry segments in 1986 — communications, which includes broadcasting, with 11 deals; photo, medical, and optical instruments, with nine; and business services, with eight. They displaced distribution and wholesale trade, which was tied for second place in 1985, with 18 transactions; and chemicals and miscellaneous manufacturing, with nine deals each.

The key discernible trend in 1986 was a slight shift away from the traditional LBO that was characterized by heavy fixed assets, manufacturing operations, and a smokestack image. The appearance of communications and business services on the most active list is suggestive of this movement. However, the repeat performances by such fields as electrical and nonelectrical machinery, primary metals, food, fabricated metal products, and printing and publishing indicate that the prototype LBO target still is desired by leveraged buyout investors. □

233 U.S. Investment Abroad

American companies completed 48 transactions overseas in the fourth quarter with a total value of $364 million.

240 Update

Additional completed merger, acquisition, and divestiture transactions from third quarter 1986 based on the latest information.

THE M&A ROSTERS, reporting the merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity of U.S. firms, are divided into four sections: U.S. Mergers and Acquisitions, Foreign Investment in the U.S., U.S. Investment Abroad, and an update of completed transactions from the prior quarter. Each section is organized alphabetically by acquirer under two-digit SIC-based industry-segment headings. A tab index, visible to the right of this page, directs users to the four major sections of the Rosters and to specific ranges of SIC-based industry segments within the first section (U.S. firms acquiring U.S. firms). Corresponding page tabs can be located by flexing the book to expose page edges. An index of SIC-based industry headings is at the bottom of the tab index page.

- acq. — acquired
- acq. add int. — acquired additional interest in
- acq. maj. int. — acquired majority interest in
- acq. rem. int. — acquired remaining interest in
- acq. unit — acquired unit/division of

An asterisk (*) following the acquired company's name indicates a divestiture.

The M&A Rosters are extracted quarterly from the M&A Data Base, a computer-accessible data bank of m&a activity from 1979 to present. While the Rosters provide basic information on all reported transactions of the preceding quarter, additional financial information — such as market price of the acquired company's stock prior to announcement, book value, premium paid, and P/E ratio — can be retrieved quickly from the M&A Data Base. The M&A Data Base also contains current data on pending transactions.

To qualify for inclusion in the M&A Data Base and the M&A Rosters, a transaction must be valued at $1 million or more. Partial acquisitions of 5 percent or more of a company's stock are included if the $1 million threshold is met. Sales of real property are not included. If price has not been revealed, the transaction is included if it is believed to meet the price threshold.

The quarterly Rosters are published in Mergers & Acquisitions as follows: 1st quarter, July/August; 2nd quarter, September/October; 3rd quarter, January/February; 4th quarter, March/April. The Mergers & Acquisitions Almanac & Index, published each May, provides a cross-index of all acquiring and acquired firms of the preceding year.

For information on regular online computer access to the M&A Data Base contact ADP Network Services at 1-800-ADP-DATA. For specific transaction data or customized research reports contact the M&A Data Base Information Center at 1-800-MERGING or 1-215-875-2631.

M&A REPORTS

- 6 Review/Preview
Merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity passed the 4,000 deal mark with dollar value at a record of $190 billion. However, insider trading scandals and a new tax law pockmarked the bright showing. Dealmakers don't believe the problems will flag down the m&a market since most transactions are fundamental, strategic arrangements.
- 13 Diversification Blues
Seven of 10 large firms seeking unrelated diversification via acquisitions have been unsuccessful.
- 16 The Growth of Junk Bonds
While junk bonds were more frequent acquisition financing vehicles in 1986, their share of the total merger market was minor.
- 20 Stiff Tests for Acquirers
Credit rankings of major corporate buyers faced tough scrutiny and a third had their ratings downgraded.
- 22 New Faces, New Names
Acquisitions and restructurings prompted 80 percent of the corporate names changes in 1986.
- 24 Probing Caches of Stock
An FTC investigation is seeking to determine if investment banker purchases of stock violated an antitrust reporting requirement.

1986 Profile

The following tables and charts summarize 1986's merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity as recorded in the M&A Data Base and published in the quarterly Rosters of Mergers & Acquisitions. To be included in the M&A Data Base and published in the Rosters, a transaction must involve a U.S. company and must be valued at $1 million or more. Partial acquisitions of 5 percent or more of a company's capital stock are included if the payments are $1 million or more. Divestitures of subsidiary units are also included on this basis. Real property sales and transfers are excluded. Where price data of a transaction have not been revealed, the transaction is included if it is believed to meet the price threshold. All data presented here are the most current available in the M&A Data Base at press time. As a result of additional information being received in the M&A Data Base, the figures presented here may be subject to revisions in future issues of Mergers & Acquisitions and may vary slightly from statistics reported in prior issues.

1986 Roster Cross-Index

The Roster Cross-Index is a list of all merger, acquisition, and divestiture activity completed during calendar year 1986 and reported in the Rosters of Mergers & Acquisitions Volume 21 Number 1 (1st Q), Volume 21 Number 2 (2nd Q), Volume 21 Number 4 (3rd Q), and Volume 21 Number 5 (4th Q). All companies, both acquiring and acquired, are listed alphabetically. In addition, where sufficient details are known, private investors also are indexed. Each listing includes all completed transactions in which that company or individual was involved during the year. Of the 4,024 transactions of 1986 that meet our reporting criteria (as defined on page 57), 96.2 percent, or 3,876 were published in the Rosters. Those that were not published were either reported after the close of our deadlines or were not revealed in sufficient detail to meet our criteria until after our deadlines. Details of such transactions are now available through the M&A Data Base.

The following abbreviations are used in the Rosters and the Roster Cross-Index:

acq. — acquired
int. — interest
add. — additional
maj. — majority
rem. — remaining
